BISMARCK.

The London Telegraph gives a very spirited account of the late debate in the German Parliament, when Bismarck turned on his assailants and rent them. The scene at the period of the motion of the assault of Kullman must have been livelier than any that has taken place at Washington. Bismarck had just completed his speech with these words:

"Kullman, when I asked him, 'Why did you want to kill me?' he answered, 'On account of the church laws in Germany.' I asked him further whether he believed, then, that he could improve matters in that way. He replied, 'Things are so bad with us that they can't be worse.' I felt convinced that he picked these phrases in some vein or other. Then he said to me, 'You have insulted my party.' I asked, 'Which then, is your party?' He replied to me, before witnesses, 'The party of the centre in the Reichstag!' Yes, gentleman, try to shake off this man as you will!
He hangs, nevertheless, to your coat-tails!"

At this last outburst, thundered against the ultra-montans, the tempest which had been brewing throughout the speech fairly broke loose, and could not for a long time be appeased. Forcible, the speaker, rung his big bell until he was tired and shouted for order; but in vain. Almost all the members sprang up in their seats, uttering cries of various purport, but all equally vehement; the sounds that went up from the body of the house were scarcely human. At last, just as the President's voice was making itself heard, Count Bismarck stood up on his seat, and looking hard at Bismarck, uttered aloud "Pit!" which is a German interjection implying utter shamefulness to the person to whom it is addressed: whereupon, before Forcible could finish his sentence, Bismarck sprang like a tiger from his seat, and, dominating the whole hurly-burly with a gesture, exclaimed: "Gentlemen, the President has already reproved what I intended to reproach to the member of the House who sits there in the second row, although reproof is not my business here; but I intend to speak my mind out about it. 'Pit!' is an expression of disgust and contempt. Do not believe, gentlemen, that I do not experience these feelings; but, only that I am too polite to utter them!" Here the storm broke out again with terrible violence. Such a scene never before took place in the House; at one moment things looked as if they must and in a free fight."

The Telegraph gives a vivid picture of Bismarck's attitude, while speaking under the tremendous excitement of the moment:
"Never did heated lion turn more savagely I venture to say—the impression of what I saw and heard being still strong upon me—more terribly than Prince Bismarck turned yesterday on his assailants, whom he figuratively said to have rent into a thousand pieces.
His gigantic frame absolutely trembled with passion; his gray eyes flashed, and his heavy mustache bristled; a paper he took up during his first speech, for purpose of reference, vibrated visibly in the passionate grasp of his stout hands, and even around his closelybuttoned uniform became tense almost to splitting across his huge chest, as he set back his shoulders and threw up his head, regarding his foes with that implacable glance which never fails to shake the strongest nerves, when he darts it at an object of his hatred or contempt. In the course of an experience, neither brief nor ordinary, I have seen many remarkable men at moments when they may have been expected to labor under excitement of the most vehement description; but I have never yet witnessed the consciousness of unbounded power expressed in the physique and bearing of a human being as I saw it yesterday in Prince Bismarck.
As he stood forward, facing the house, the natural sternness of his aspect accentuated by the natural rigidity of his military tenure, he looked to me like the incarnation of an ungovernable will; like a Colossus, unquestionably capable of bearing upon his mighty shoulders cares and responsibilities that would crush a common mortal into powder."

SELL THE BEST

DOLLAR CORSET

IN THE CITY.
Dress Makers recommend it as being the best Corset to fit a dress over, because it is cut in such a manner that the front and back seams fit like seams to a dress.

It is superior to any other Corset now in use, because its peculiar style of cutting gives sufficient fullness at the bosom, without folding at the top; gradually and closely fitting to, and over the hips, is longer front and back than ordinary Corsets, and in fact is the only Corset cut in this form.

In addition to the DOLLAR CORSET will be found a large assortment of other makes at the following prices—$1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.50, $3.50 and $5.
